Read the following passage and answer the questions that follow:

I remember another funny incident about Bhola Grandpa related by my father. It had been a rainy afternoon. Bhola Grandpa, wild with excitement, told my father and his friends that he had seen a gang of pirates. They were burying a large box under one of the sand dunes on the seashore by our village. At once father and his friends started looking for the hidden treasure. Evening passed on to night. Moonlight came in through the clouds. A pack of jackals were howling. It was past midnight. At this point of time, Bhola Grandpa confessed that there was no real treasure. It was all a dream which he had during his midday nap. Once Bhola Grandpa had a great adventure in the Sunderbans. In those days Royal Bengal tigers freely roamed the dense jungles of the Sunderbans. People took care to move about only in groups, particularly after sundown. One evening, Bhola Grandpa was returning from the weekly market. Suddenly at a distance of about five yards behind him, he heard the growl of a Royal Bengal tiger. Bhola Grandpa turned and found the bright gaze of the tiger on his face. Bhola Grandpa instantly climbed up a nearby banyan tree. The tiger roared and circled the tree about a hundred times. Then it settled down under a bush without taking its eyes off him. With nightfall, the forest grew dark and silent. Bhola Grandpa could hear the tiger beating its tail on the dry leaves. Hours passed.

Competition Among Three Artists

Once upon a time, there were three great artists in a kingdom. They were very proud of themselves. Each of them thought himself to be the best painter. They held a competition to decide who was the best artist among them. The king was appointed as the judge of the competition. The first artist drew a bunch of flowers. The second artist painted a basket of fruits, while the third artist painted a curtain. The flower was so natural that a bee sat on it for honey. Some birds tried to eat the fruit. All the people praised the artists. Then the judge went to see what was behind the curtain by lifting it up. In his amazement the king realized that the curtain is painted. The spellbound king declared the third painter as winner. Though the paintings of other painters deceived animals, the third painting deceived the most intelligent creature, human.
